The model is shout thirty luches long, made of iron, and the whole machinery encard in a shut iron box. The gun was placed on a stand, and a large dry goods box ast up scainst a bank about farty yards distant. The machinery was put in motion, when the gun discharged balls into and through the box into the bank at the rate of three hundred and rixty balls per minute. In order to give some idea of what this gar will be capable of doing, when manufactured of enitable size: I will, give as full a description of the same as my knowledge from an examination will parmit. It is a gravitation loading, multiplying revolver, bung nion a switch, and so constructed and arranged that it can be drawn by man ne himser, placed on beard of vestels or forts, and is eapable or projecting balls, shot or shell with all the force and accuracy of the most improved fire orms now in use, at the extraordinary rate of from three hundred to twelve hundred perminute, according to the size of the cylinder. Sice and dimensions of the model.

Cylinder, tan (10) leches in dismeter, six and a half (84) inches long, the pironinference of which is divided into twenty eight (28) equal parts, each of which contains three (3) chambers; these three chambers are connected at their bake by a small hole: the right-hand chamber of each volley is provided with a pan take, which when expladed nice call a 'rog iron' which has twenty-sight [28] Rent moderate. notchin, each of which is on a direct line with most volley, which notches are for the nurpose of revolving the ovinder by means of a lever and reigulating the position of the cylinder so as to correenand with the three (3) harrels in front. The machinery for revolving, closding, camping and firing, is placed just back of the evlinder, baving a two-storied detached Granite Godown. which for simplicity and scoursey in working is the most extraordinary part of the cun; shows the cylinder is placed two (2) hoppers, one for powder, the other for halls, in which the powder. and bails are emptiod; under these hoppers are chargers, which one he charged to suit the charge of nowder desired; these chargers are connected rately, no matter how fast the same may be re-tion for the harrels, the can is exploded. The exhibition on Saturday fully demonstrated Brooks; Auctioncers, Wyndham Street. the practicability and nillity of the gan. The inventor designs manufacturing a gon of medium size as soon as possible. He is a man of more genius than morns, and has to work when circumaffinces will permit. The invention has been secured by the inventor by filing the necessary papers at Washington. | Bolis one is sure to realize | can be ladened and discharged. a handsome fortune from the manufacture and sale of these guns.
